Essay on Prophet Muhammad Peace Be Upon Him in 300 Words

For Class 8 to 10

Prophet Muhammad, peace be upon him, holds the highest position among all prophets as the final messenger of Allah to humanity. Born in Makkah in 570 CE in the noble Quraysh tribe, he was orphaned early in life. His father, Abdullah, died before his birth, and his mother, Amina, passed away when he was six years old. Despite these hardships, he grew up to be a person of exceptional character, known throughout Makkah for his honesty, trustworthiness, and wisdom. Before receiving prophethood, he was called Al Amin, the trustworthy one, and Al Sadiq, the truthful. People from all backgrounds respected him and sought his advice in resolving disputes. At age 40, while meditating in the Cave of Hira during Ramadan, he received the first revelation from Allah through Angel Jibrael. The first word revealed was Iqra, meaning read or recite, emphasizing the importance of knowledge. This event marked the beginning of Islam and his mission as the final prophet. For the next 23 years, Prophet Muhammad dedicated his life to spreading Islam and guiding people towards the straight path. The early years in Makkah were extremely difficult as the Quraysh leaders fiercely opposed Islam and persecuted Muslims. They tortured early converts, imposed social and economic boycotts, and even planned to assassinate the Prophet. Despite this persecution, he remained patient, continuing to preach with wisdom and compassion. In 622 CE, he migrated to Madinah, where Islam flourished and an Islamic state was established based on justice, equality, and brotherhood. The Prophet's character was absolutely perfect, serving as a complete example for humanity. He was kind and playful with children, respectful and caring towards women, generous to the poor and needy, just in all his dealings, brave in facing difficulties, and merciful even towards those who harmed him. When he conquered Makkah, he forgave all his enemies who had persecuted him for years. His household lived simply despite his position, often going hungry while helping others. He treated his wives with love and respect, participated in household chores, and valued their opinions. As Muslims, we express our love and respect for Prophet Muhammad by following his Sunnah in all aspects of life, sending blessings upon him regularly, teaching his teachings to our children, and striving to develop the beautiful qualities he exemplified. His life remains the most comprehensive guide for living righteously and achieving success in both this world and the hereafter.

Essay on Prophet Muhammad Peace Be Upon Him in 500 Words

For Class 9 to 12 & FSc

Introduction

Prophet Muhammad, peace be upon him, is the final messenger of Allah and the most beloved personality in Islam. Born in Makkah in 570 CE, he came at a time when humanity had fallen into ignorance, injustice, and idol worship. His mission was to guide people back to the worship of one Allah and to establish a way of life based on justice, compassion, and moral excellence. Over 1.8 billion Muslims worldwide follow his teachings, send blessings upon him daily, and strive to emulate his perfect character. His life story is not just religious history but a comprehensive guide for every aspect of human existence.

Early Life and Character

Prophet Muhammad was born into the respected Quraysh tribe of Makkah. His father, Abdullah, died before his birth, and his mother, Amina, passed away when he was only six years old. He was then raised by his grandfather, Abdul Muttalib, and later by his uncle, Abu Talib. Despite being an orphan, he grew up with exceptional character. Even before prophethood, he was known throughout Makkah as Al Amin, the trustworthy, and Al Sadiq, the truthful. People of all backgrounds trusted him completely, leaving their valuable possessions in his care. He never worshipped idols even though idol worship was common in Makkah. He was known for his honesty in business, his kindness to the weak, and his wisdom in resolving disputes.

Prophethood and the Early Muslim Community

At age 40, while meditating in the Cave of Hira during the month of Ramadan, Prophet Muhammad received the first revelation from Allah through Angel Jibrael. The angel commanded him to read, revealing the first verses of the Quran. This event marked the beginning of his 23 year mission as the final prophet. He began preaching Islam, first privately to close family and friends, then publicly to all of Makkah. His message was simple but revolutionary: worship one Allah alone, abandon idol worship, treat everyone justly, help the poor and orphans, free slaves, and live moral lives. His wife Khadija was the first to accept Islam, followed by his close friend Abu Bakr, his cousin Ali, and his freed slave Zaid.

Persecution and Migration

The Quraysh leaders fiercely opposed Islam because it threatened their power and the profitable idol worship business at the Kaaba. They mocked, insulted, and physically tortured early Muslims. Some Muslims were forced to lie on burning sand, others were beaten severely, and one companion, Sumayya, became the first martyr of Islam when she was killed for refusing to renounce her faith. Despite this persecution, the Prophet remained patient and compassionate, never cursing his enemies but praying for their guidance. When persecution became unbearable, he sent some Muslims to Abyssinia for protection, and finally, in 622 CE, he migrated to Madinah. This migration, known as Hijrah, marks the beginning of the Islamic calendar and was a turning point for Islam.

The Prophet's Perfect Character

Prophet Muhammad's character was absolutely perfect in every dimension, serving as a complete model for humanity. He was extraordinarily kind to children, often playing with them and showing affection. He gave women rights unprecedented in that era, forbidding female infanticide, guaranteeing inheritance rights, and treating his wives with love and respect. He participated in household chores, mended his own clothes, and never considered any work beneath him. His generosity was limitless; he gave away everything he had to those in need, often going hungry himself. When he conquered Makkah after years of persecution, he showed remarkable mercy, forgiving all his enemies and declaring general amnesty. His justice was absolute, applying the same standards to everyone regardless of their status. He was brave in battle, compassionate to animals, environmentally conscious, and spiritually devoted, spending much of his nights in prayer.

The Prophet's Legacy and Our Responsibility

Prophet Muhammad completed his mission, transforming Arabia from a barbaric society into a civilization based on justice, knowledge, and morality. His final sermon at Arafat summarized his teachings: all humans are equal, no one is superior except through piety, rights of women must be respected, and Muslims should hold fast to the Quran and Sunnah. After his death in 632 CE, Islam continued to spread across the world. Today, Muslims express their love for the Prophet by following his Sunnah in daily life, studying his biography, sending blessings upon him, teaching his character to children, and defending his honor. His life remains the most comprehensive and practical guide for achieving success in this world and the hereafter.

Conclusion

Prophet Muhammad, peace be upon him, is the greatest blessing Allah sent to humanity. His life transformed the world, bringing light to darkness and guidance to those who were lost. Every aspect of his life, from personal habits to social dealings, from family relations to governance, provides perfect examples for us to follow. As Pakistani Muslims, we must not only love the Prophet emotionally but also strive practically to emulate his character, follow his teachings, and spread his message of peace, justice, and submission to Allah. May Allah enable us to follow the Prophet's path and grant us his intercession on the Day of Judgment.
